

Maja Bosen, artist, dreamer, walking poet whose present encaustic work weaves wax, pigment and various materials – both manmade and of nature – into potential moments of reflection and a shared intimacy with nature and time’s passage.

“Observing the interconnectivity of nature and humanity, I attempt to create an intimate space to reflect upon our shared cycles – the rise, fall, ebb, flow, evolution, fruition and ultimate dissipation. These quiet moments of grace are a celebration of what is, was and remains but is not yet gone. This journey influences my drawings, paintings and sculptures.”

As well as having received her BFA from the Art Institute of Chicago, Maja has pursued studies at Parson’s School of Design, the NewSchool for Social Research in NYC and the San Francisco Art Institute. She has explored many artistic channels in an attempt to find one that most clearly resonates with the message at hand. Maja has exhibited and performed in Chicago, San Francisco and New York in both solo and with group exhibitions at various times throughout her creative career.

At this time, she is proud to call the Zhou B Arts Center in Chicago’s Bridgeport neighborhood, home.
